The procedure of adoption is multi-stage procedure which is governed by law. This allows the adoption to go through private agencies, a children's aid society, or the court.

Private Adoption

Private adoptions are managed by agencies licensed to provide private adoption services. In private adoptions, the birth parents pick the adoptive parents. If you know of an available child for adoption, you can contact a private adoption licensee. Private adoptions can be stressful emotionally and because of the paperwork requirements involved. It is suggested that you obtain legal counsel for help.

Public Adoption

A public adoption means adopting a child through a children's aid society in instances in which the birth parents would like another family to adopt their child or the Court has determined that the parents cannot handle the job of raising a child. Public adoptions are difficult and require the help of a skillful lawyer. We understand the nuances of the public adoption system. Our firm would provide you with expert representation.

International Adoption

For an international adoption, skilled legal representation is rather significant, since this adoption procedure is the most difficult. It is essential that you are aware of the international law complexities, and that you stay within the immigration laws, adoption laws, and the laws of the home country of the child, which gives final adoption approval. International adoption agencies are approved to deal with such cases. The procedure would involve a home study and letter of approval from Children and Youth Services.
